This Evening and Tonight:
Some showery rain during this evening, but becoming dry overnight with clearing skies. This will allow it to turn colder than last night, with a widespread frost developing. One or two showers cannot be ruled out in more coastal regions. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
After a cold and frosty start, plenty of sunshine through the morning. Cloud bubbling up though, perhaps giving a very isolated afternoon shower. Feeling chilly but with generally light winds. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Staying fine this weekend with cold and frosty nights, followed by dry days with some sunshine, especially during the mornings. Rather cloudy on Monday but probably staying mainly dry.
